1     I. THERE IS GOOD CAUSE TO ALLOW THE AMENDMENT SO THE 2       CLASS DEFINITION CAN CONFORM TO THE EVIDENCE AND THE 3       DEFINITION ALLEGED IN THE MOTION FOR CLASS
4       CERTIFICATION.

5              Defendants raise three arguments against granting leave to amend. First, they 6       complain the amendment greatly expands the class to include persons whose information 7       was never accepted by a lender (i.e., the corresponding lead was not acquired). Secondly, 8       Defendants argue the deadline to amend has passed. Third, Defendants argue the 9       redefined class cannot possibly state a legal claim. All of these arguments should be 10       rejected.

11           A. THE EXPANDED CLASS IS LIMITED TO THOSE PERSONS
12            WHOSE “APPLICATION” WAS ACCEPTED BY A LENDER 13            EVEN IF NO LOAN RESULTED.

14              Defendants have overstated the “expansion” of the class as alleged in the Fifth 15       Amended Complaint. Previously, the class was limited to persons who obtained payday 16       loans through a Selling Source website (including moneymutual.com). Now it includes 17       persons who applied for a loan through a Selling Source affiliated website but only if the 18       lead was acquired by a lender. The term “applied” was not intended to refer to persons 19       who filled out information on the Selling Source website but the loan application was 20       never acquired by any lender. Because Defendants appear to be confused on this distinction, the following language clarifies the definition of the Main Class:

21              All California residents listed in a spreadsheet produced by 22       Defendants that specifies the corresponding lead was “completed” and who applied for a payday loan from 23       an UNLICENSED LENDER on or after February 11, 2009
24       using any website affiliated with or in response to an email 25       from Selling Source, LLC or one of its subsidiaries. Any lender owned by an American Indian tribe during the entire Class
     Period is excluded. (emphasis added)

26              In their opposition, Defendants state “Plaintiffs have greatly multiplied the scope of the 27       class, as the majority of leads offered by Selling Source or its affiliates are not acquired by 1 a lender." (Doc. 232, p. 2:7-9.) That expansion is not what Plaintiffs want to do. Plaintiffs 2 are not seeking to include person in the class merely because they filled out a loan 3 application and their information was "offered" to lenders. That would greatly increase 4 the size of the class, but that is not what the newly defined Class is doing.

6 Similarly, Defendants state in their opposition, "Plaintiffs have long known that 7 there would be persons that applied for payday loans but whose leads were never 8 purchased by lenders, or which leads never resulted in a consummated loan." (Doc. 232, 9 p. 5:3-5.) The first assertion that Plaintiffs knew there were persons whose leads were 10 never purchased is true but such persons were never part of the putative class and even 11 after this amendment still are not part of it. However, the second assertion is not true.
 12 Plaintiffs did not long know that even after an application met the lender's requirements 13 and therefore the lead (or loan application) was purchased by a lender, the process still 14 did not result in a consummated loan.

15 Thus Defendants' statement that "most leads" they offered are not successfully 16 acquired by lenders is misleading. (Doc. 232, p. 5:5-6.) It may be true that most leads 17 offered do not meet the requirements of any lender and therefore are not acquired, but 18 that has no bearing of the proposed class. The new class definition does not encompass 19 those leads. Defendants do not claim that most leads that do meet at least one lender's 20 requirements and which therefore are acquired, never become consummated leads. In 21 fact, that would be counter-intuitive. If lenders routinely purchased leads but never even 22 made loans to the subjects in question, they would stop buying the leads in short order.
 23 That is not what happened.

24 Defendants' confusion is similarly evident in their statement that this amendment 25 was not previously proposed because Plaintiff realized the transactions "did not generate 26 income for Selling Source or its affiliates because their leads were not acquired by 27 lenders." (Doc. 232, p. 5:13-16.) That's correct. Plaintiffs did not previously include 28

1 transactions where leads were not acquired by the lenders and Selling Source was not paid 2 and still does not intend to do so.

3 To see why this amendment is necessary, we turn to Defendants' officer, Tim 4 Madsen, who presents a concise explanation of how Defendants market payday loans to 5 consumers. (Doc. 233-16, ¶¶ 2-10.) Defendants obtain leads which consist of the personal 6 information for payday loan borrowers. Defendants then offer the leads to "screened 7 lenders" who have contracted with Defendants. Lenders who are offered a lead but do 8 not accept it are required to delete the consumer's personal information. Defendants 9 maintain an electronic database of "all leads which have been offered since September, 10 2009 to contracting lenders." Reports from this database are the spreadsheets that were 11 provided to Plaintiffs in discovery. The spreadsheets identify the potential borrower's 12 name, address, phone number and email address. They also identify the date and time 13 the lead is generated and the source of the lead. Most significantly for our purposes, the 14 database indicates whether the lead "FAILED," meaning that it was not acquired by any 15 lender to whom the lead was circulated, or was "COMPLETED," meaning the lead was 16 acquired by a lender to whom it was circulated and, if so, the identity of the contracting 17 lender.
 18

19 To be clear, the proposed Main Class is only comprised of those borrowers whose 20 loan applications correspond to the leads that were marked as "Completed" and not the 21 greater number of leads that "Failed."

22 B. ALTHOUGH THE COURT'S DEADLINE FOR AMENDMENTS 23 HAS PASSED, THERE HAVE BEEN SUBSEQUENT 24 AMENDMENTS AND THERE IS NO PREJUDICE TO 25 DEFENDANTS IN ALLOWING THIS FURTHER REVISION.

26 Although the Court did set a deadline to amend the complaint, it did not set a full 27 schedule including discovery cutoff dates, pre-trial conference and trial dates. Moreover, 28 as pointed out in the moving papers, amendments occurred after the deadline in response

1 to legal challenges asserted by Defendants. Defendants have requested a number of 2 continuances over time, including of the briefing schedule on the motion for class 3 certification, and the Court has been flexible in extending deadlines. There is no reason 4 for that flexibility to change now.

5 Defendants complain they would be prejudiced by permitting the amendment 6 because the size of the class would be greatly expanded. As explained above, this belief is 7 misguided because it is premised on the faulty assumption that the new proposed class is 8 includes consumers tied to “failed” leads, which it does not. It was always assumed that 9 everyone listed in the database as being a person whose loan application was accepted by 10 a lender would be a class member entitled to full relief. However, during the recent course 11 of this litigation, it became clear that there were some isolated circumstances where an 12 applicant met the lender’s requirements and therefore the lender paid Defendants for the 13 referral but no loan actually was consummated. These are the persons to be included in 14 the new separate class which seeks only limited relief.

15 Defendants concede the amendment adds no new cause of action and adds no new 16 remedy. The only change is to expand the class to include readily identifiable persons 17 whose loan applications were “completed,” but did not result in a loan being 18 consummated. Defendants do not deny that they were paid money for these completed 19 applications. Disgorgement of revenue from selling the leads was sought in prior versions 20 of the complaint as noted in the moving papers as part of the remedy for borrowers who 21 received loans. (Doc. 176, ¶¶ 1115, 128, Prayer for Relief ¶ 6.) Now it will also be the only 22 remedy for those whose leads were acquired but they did not receive a loan. Defendants 23 do not claim the amendment would trigger a need to conduct any additional discovery or 24 cause any delay in the proceedings.

25 Finally, Defendants do not dispute that their records show Cash Yes purchased a 26 lead from Defendants that was tied to Plaintiff Malone’s loan application or that during 27

1 the course of this litigation Cash Yes presented evidence that the loan was never 2 consummated. Therefore, Malone could represent the proposed Main Class.

4 C. THE EXPANDED CLASS CAN STATE A LEGAL CLAIM.

5 Defendants' primary argument is that the amendment should be denied because 6 the newly defined Main Class cannot state a legal claim. Defendants discuss the second, 7 third and fourth causes of action but there is no need to discuss those as Plaintiffs do not 8 seek relief on those claims on behalf of the Main Class members. The Main Class 9 Members only seek relief under the CDDTL, the first cause of action.

10 Financial Code § 23005 (a) provides:

11 A person shall not offer, originate, or make a deferred deposit 12 transaction, arrange a deferred deposit transaction for a 13 deferred deposit originator, act as an agent for a deferred deposit originator, or assist a deferred deposit originator in the origination of a deferred deposit 14 transaction without first obtaining a license from the 15 commissioner and complying with the provisions of this division. (emphasis added)

16 Financial Code § 23064 provides:

17 Any person who is injured by any violation of this division 18 may bring an action for the recovery of damages, an equity 19 proceeding to restrain and enjoin those violations, or both.
 20 The amount awarded may be up to three times the damages
 21 actually incurred, but in no event less than the amount paid 22 by the aggrieved consumer to a person subject to this section.
 23 If the plaintiff prevails, the plaintiff shall be awarded 24 reasonable attorney's fees and costs. If a court determines by 25 clear and convincing evidence that a breach or violation was 26 willful, the court, in its discretion, may award punitive 27 damages in addition to the amounts set forth above. Upon application, the court may also grant any equitable relief that it deems proper, including, but not limited to, a claim for restitution and disgorgement. (emphasis added)

28 The foregoing makes it clear that it is illegal (and a violation of the CDDTL) to offer a 29 payday loan without a license (or assist the lender in offering the loan), even if the loan is 30

1 never consummated. In fact it is not just illegal but a criminal offense. (Financial Code 2 § 23065.)

3 Defendants argue the amendment is futile because the proposed Main Class cannot 4 allege a plausible way in which it was “injured” by a violation of the CDDTL. Defendants 5 insist “injured” must mean “lost money” on the loan because § 23064 provides that in no 6 event can recoverable damages be less than the amount paid by the consumers on the 7 loans. However, the statute does not limit remedies to those found in a damages action.
 8 The statute also provides relief even in the absence of financial damages. Upon a showing 9 of injury (which for that reason cannot be equated to “damages”), a consumer can bring 10 “an equity proceeding” as an alternative to a claim for damages. An equity action does 11 not require Plaintiffs to plead financial loss.

12 Defendants do not otherwise discuss the injury requirement. In particular, they 13 offer no discussion of Article III standing. For that reason alone, the Court should permit 14 the amendment and Defendants can later bring a motion to dismiss and more fully brief 15 the question whether the proposed Main Class members can obtain any form of relief 16 under Financial Code § 23064 or whether Article III standing concerns are triggered.

17 Nevertheless, if the Court is expecting a fuller showing at this time that the Main 18 Class can ultimately prevail on the CDDTL claim, Plaintiffs offer the following. The 19 CDDTL does not define the term “injured” to require a loss of money. Since it is illegal 20 for unlicensed lenders and their agents to offer a payday loan, persons to whom the illegal 21 loans were offered fall within the universe of consumers intended to be protected by the 22 statute. The fact the statute allows consumers to recover “any” form of equitable relief, 23 even absent any financial loss, further supports a broad construction of “injury.”

24 Further support for a broad construction of “injury” is found in the fact 25 nonrestitutionary disgorgement is an authorized remedy, even if it is the only remedy 26 sought. In Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1149-1152,

1 the California Supreme Court distinguished between restitution or restitutionary 2 disgorgement on the one hand and nonrestitutionary disgorgement on the other hand.
 3 When the plaintiff seeks return of money that was in his possession or in which he has a 4 vested interest, that is restitution. When the plaintiff seeks an order that a wrongdoer 5 disgorge profits it illegally made from a transaction related to the plaintiff, that is 6 nonrestitutionary disgorgement. While nonrestitutionary disgorgement is not available 7 under the Unfair Competition Law, it is explicitly available under the CDDTL. (See also, 8 Frieman v. San Rafael Rock Quarry, Inc. (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 29, 36.)

9 As explained in Feitelberg v. Credit Suisse First Boston, LLC (2005) 134 10 Cal.App.4th 997, 1013, “with nonrestitutionary disgorgement, the focus is on the 11 defendant's gain from the unfair practice; the plaintiff need not have suffered a loss.”
 12 Along the same lines, the court in County of San Bernardino v. Walsh (2007) 158
 13 Cal.App.4th 533, 542 explained that public policy does not allow a wrongdoer to profit 14 from his own wrong, regardless of whether the other party suffered actual damages. “In 15 particular, a person acting in conscious disregard of the rights of another should be 16 required to disgorge all profit because disgorgement both benefits the injured parties and 17 deters the perpetrator from committing the same unlawful actions again.” (Id.) This 18 concept fits Selling Source's conduct in promoting illegal payday loans in exchange for 19 commissions from the lenders.

20 Since the Legislature sought to protect consumers from even being “offered” illegal 21 loans, and since disgorgement of profits made by the marketing or offering of illegal loans
 22 is a listed remedy, it follows that the Legislature intended “injury” to be defined broadly 23 to include certain persons who were offered illegal payday loans.

24 At this point an argument could be made that the Legislature could not have 25 intended to confer standing on all persons who were offered a payday loan. This Court 26 need not expound on the universe of persons who might have standing to make a CDDTL

1 claim since there is a concrete, objective standard that can be used to distinguish the class 2 members from other persons who might have only seen an advertisement for an illegal 3 loan.

4       Each of the class members were not only exposed to an illegal loan offer, but 5 completed the online application on the websites maintained or affiliated with Selling 6 Source and was required to provide highly personal information including his name, 7 address, wage information, bank account number, social security number, date of birth, 8 etc. Further, the applications at issue met the criteria of the lender so the applications (or 9 leads) were acquired by and thus seen by the lenders. Even if a consumer later backed 10 out of the loan somehow, or the lender was unable to verify the consumer's employment, 11 or the loan fell through for some other reason, the consumer's highly sensitive personal 12 information was still disseminated to criminal lending operations (based overseas 13 typically).

14       This leads to two sources of injury. First, Class Members were put at grave risk 15 their sensitive information would be misused. They do not have to prove their 16 information was actually misused because they do not seek damages for misuse, but they 17 have sustained injury nonetheless. In a discussion of Article III standing, the Ninth 18 Circuit has recognized that future risk of identity theft or misuse of personal information 19 is sufficient to plead injury-in-fact for Article III standing. (Krottner v. Starbucks Corp.
 20 (9th Cir. 2010) 628 F.3d 1139, 1142 (holding a Plaintiff has standing where he alleges his 21 personal information was wrongfully disseminated thereby increasing the risk of harm, 22 regardless of whether the actual harm had yet occurred); see also, Antman v. Uber Techs., 23 Inc. (N.D.Cal. Oct. 19, 2015, No. 3:15-cv-01175-LB) 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141945, at *28;
 24 In re Adobe Sys. Privacy Litig. (N.D.Cal. 2014) 66 F. Supp. 3d 1197, 1211; In re Sony
 25 Gaming Networks & Customer Data Sec. Breach Litig. (S.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2014) 996 F.
 26 Supp. 2d. 942, 959-962.) Here, through the violation of the CDDTL the class members'

1 highly personal information was gathered via Selling Source's websites and then 2 disseminated to the illegal lenders. The injury is not speculative. The information was 3 given to criminals thereby meeting the requirements for showing "injury."

5 Second, consumers spent time (and money if their internet usage was metered or 6 not unlimited) to type out their information on the online applications created by Selling 7 Source Defendants. They may not have bothered to do that if they knew the lenders were 8 illegal and criminal. Therefore, they wasted time and possibly money pursuing illegal 9 loans which they would not have done absent Defendants' marketing of the illegal payday 10 loans. Again, there is no need to attempt to place a value on this time or internet usage 11 costs because damages are not being pursued for these Class Members (unless they also 12 qualify for one of the other damages classes). They are only seeking disgorgement of 13 Defendants' profits, an amount of money easily established from Defendants' own 14 records.

15 CONCLUSION

16 For the above stated reasons, Plaintiffs respectfully urge the Court to grant the 17 motion to file the Fifth Amended Complaint.
